Defeated But Not Demoralized.

Amid the regrets of defeat it is gratifying to find indications on all sides that the Republicans of the country, instead of weakening under this first, National, reverse, are meeting it with a spirit of high courage and with ranks more solidly united than they have been for years.

The people are too intelligent to fail to estimate and appreciate at once the moral results which rendered possible by the struggling of popular suffrage in an entire section of the country, and finally determined by a handful of votes in the State of New York. Cleveland's election, like himself, as described by Alexander Sullivan, has been the "willessness of the accident," and to attribute to it, under the circumstances, the majesty of the "voice of the people" would be a burlesque upon the facts.

The Republican party is still the party of the people, where the people are permitted to rule, and here in Maine, and in New England, save in a single State, it has just won victories thrilling the greatest in the party's history. In the great central States like Ohio and Pennsylvania, it has received magnificent endorsements and the States of the Pacific Coast have come up together to its support.

To-day the Republican party is heartily sustained by the brain, the conscience, the patriotism and the intelligent industry of the American people and it is now and for the future the champion of those principles which lie at the foundation of moral and material prosperity.

It has gained immense accessions during the recent campaign from the ranks of the thoughtful working people of the country, and these reinforcements have come to stay with the party that espouses the interests of American labor and denies the continued protection of American industry.

The Republican party still represents the spirit that upheld and preserved our nationality and emancipated a race, as distinctively as the Democratic party represents the spirit that sympathized with Slavery and Rebellion. Upon every great moral and political question affecting the welfare of our people, the Republican party is as distinctively right, as Democracy is stubbornly wrong.

At the very basis of the Democratic triumph of to-day is the crying outrage of the Solid South's 153 packed electoral votes, and every application for purity of the ballot is a rebuke to an election thus tainted.

The Republican party of the hour has stood firmly together, to strengthen the organization for the work before us, and to cultivate faith that the great loyal North, which was equal to the trying emergencies of darker days than these, need only continue united and determinedly for the right to win other and greater triumphs in the not distant future.

The Result.

(Boston Journal.)

Grover Cleveland has been selected to the White House, and this time the Democratic party is to be led and the Nation governed. He has been elected to power by a combination of men and circumstances which are without natural cohesion. Behind him stands the solid South, and all its to reap the reward of their fidelity to the Democratic party, and determined to break their long fast or prolonged fasting. Behind him stands the Democratic party of the North, revived at Chicago next to fill the offices with their own retainers. And behind these stand the recreant Republicans professing to be able to shape the administration, but who, no distant day will awaken to the fact that they have made a Democratic President, who will be indifferent to their counsels and will spurn their advice. This is the field which opens to the American people. This is the field which has been planted by our opponents. What the harvest will be it is useless to consider.

The election of Grover Cleveland does not place in the White House a man of ability or a man of sound judgment. No man ever went into the Presidential chair so badly qualified for the position. He is neither a statesman nor an able politician. He has been an incident. To oppose him as a reformer is an insult to the common sense of the people who know him. The Boston Globe in its issue of July 1 said:—"No inflated or watered stock dare lay its scarred to the Democracy for its suffrages. A man of local reputation cannot be transformed by the convention to a man of national importance. This will be done if Cleveland is nominated." Yes, and it was accomplished at Chicago. A third-class lawyer, who, through a combination of circumstances, stumbled into the Governorship of New York, was raised above all the old party leaders, and actually forced upon the convention by strikers and corrupt politicians. They of his inner circle knew the man, his calibre, his habits, his scope. They saw in him, one who could be controlled for purposes of their own.

The Republican party has come out of the contest without battering its principles or a stain upon its glorious record. Its gallant leader has uttered no word, from the day he sent out his masterly letter of acceptance till he closed his wonderful campaign in Boston, that even its enemies could distort into an improper use. He has educated the American people by his writings and his speeches. No man in our political history has stood up so manfully before the attacks of men, who seemed determined not only to crush him politically, but to carry irreparable grief into the sacred precincts of his home. He has been hounded as no man running for a great office was ever hounded before, and yet we see him to-day calm and resolute, accepting the verdict without complaint, greater in the esteem of his supporters, stronger in the affections of the people than when he was first proclaimed our leader at the Chicago Convention. The prize is lost, but he has triumphed because of the support of the millions who honor and respect him.

The Republicans have a duty to perform, greater in the hour of defeat than in the hour of victory. The scales will drop from the eyes of the misguided, and new light will dawn upon the young voters as they feel the effects of Democratic supremacy. The great Republican army is not broken or disheartened. There has been treachery in the camp. The traitors have gone out. Let them stay out. The organization must be strengthened, and its doors widened, to admit all men who subscribe to its principles. Men may pass away, but an army which has been repulsed by causes which do not affect the vital and living issues cannot be disbanded. There are memories of the past, as potent to-day as they were twenty years ago, which will never be forgotten, and there are deeds inscribed upon the history of our Nation by the Republican party which entitle it to years upon years of power and influence. We have met with a repulse—and the victory clothed Lodge upon us might and thread that it can and will be reversed at the next popular election."

Some Plain Facts.

(New York Tribune, Saturday, Nov. 15.)

We discover there and there among the Republican papers that persistently always opposed to Mr. Blaine a disposition to ascribe the responsibility of defeat—if defeat it is to be—to his candidacy. We propose to nip that complaint in the bud by citing some plain facts.

During the three years that followed the death of President Garfield the Republican party throughout had few elements of trouble and discouragement. Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Kansas, Colorado, Nevada and California were all carried in 1882 or 1883 by the Democrats, three-fourths of the States that voted for Garfield were under the rule of Democratic Governors the day Mr. Blaine was nominated for President. The outlook was certainly not cheerful, as every one knows who has the right to know that Mr. Blaine was extremely reluctant to abandon the congenial task to which he was engaged, to lead a political fight which was surrounded with so many disheartening elements. Never before in the National contests of the Republican party had the prospect been so unpromising, before or after election, to the Democrats so confident of the stability to win a National struggle.

The result spoke for itself. Under Mr. Blaine's lead Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Kansas, Colorado, Nevada and California were gloriously carried. Not only was the political control changed, but the popular verdict was wonderfully strong for Mr. Blaine. Ohio gave him a majority only once or twice surpassed in the History of the State. California gave him the largest popular majority he ever cast. Michigan recovered from the twenty thousand adverse majority under which the Republican party was buried in 1882-'83. Colorado and Nevada came back to the Republican fold with renewed vigor and increased faith. Not only were these States brought back, but great populations elsewhere attested the strength of Mr. Blaine's candidacy. Pennsylvania sustained him by a majority not more than eighty thousand; Kansas by sixty thousand; Minnesota by fifty-three thousand; Iowa and Nebraska by overwhelming numbers. Oregon trebled the majority she had given to Garfield.

Not only were the popular majorities large, but in nearly every one of the electoral tickets ran far ahead of the State and local tickets. In Illinois, though Governor Oglesby is very popular, his majority was 15,000 less than that given to Blaine and Logan. In Michigan, Governor Alger with all his strength and prestige, fell thousands behind Mr. Blaine. Indeed, gain was made in almost every Northern State except Massachusetts and Connecticut, and in the latter the difference between the vote of Mr. Blaine and that of Governor Harrison is inconsiderable.

The final decision is still pending in New York, and here as everyone knows the peculiar difficulties surrounding Mr. Blaine's canvass. And yet, with the bolt of the Independents, the defection of the Prohibitionists, the embassage of the Cornish Saints and the intolerant remark of Dr. Burchard, the vote is so close that ten days after election the official figuring to see whether Mr. Blaine has not as many votes as Governor Cleveland, who carried the State in 1882 by a majority of nearly two hundred thousand.

Right in this city, the very centre of the independent strength, Mr. Blaine received a vote several thousands larger than was ever before given to any Republican candidate, and larger than that given to the excellent candidate for municipal officer who was supported by the entire Independent vote.

We cite these facts, not for any invidious comparison, but only to vindicate the superb and indeed the unparalleled canvass made by Mr. Blaine. But we should really be glad to hear the name of any other President candidate who, in the opinion of the Pennsylvania Republicans, or of Western Republicans, or of the Republicans of the Pacific Coast, could have rallied the great host called forth by Mr. Blaine in the campaign of 1884.

Cleveland and Civil Service.

George William Curtis, who has been supporting Cleveland with all his might and main, now admits that he does not know what Cleveland's views upon civil service may be. His faith, he says, is based upon some knowledge of his character. Mr. Hudson interviewed Cleveland in behalf of the Boston Herald, and sought to impart some of the political wisdom of his chiefs to the future President, and we should judge that he retired with a flea in his ear. Mr. Hudson says:

"I inquired of him whether it might not be worth while for him to in some way indicate, if that were his purpose, that the spirit of the civil service regulations would be adhered to after the 4th of March next. To this the Governor briskly replied 'I think I have said enough on that subject. It is in my letter; it is in the platform. There is no use trying to beat brains into people's heads. Let them attend to their business—let them attend to their business,' he said, repeating the words in a very decided manner and with a gesture of the head that indicated more than the tone in which he spoke."

For interview No. 1 on behalf of the Mugwumps this is rather indicative of Grover's determination to be a Democrat.

An Interesting Reminiscence.

(New York Sun, Dem.)

There is a silly superstition that a man who has been President becomes too great and gorgeous to do anything, within the sphere of ordinary usefulness afterward. On this theory Mr. Geo. Jones, of the Times, raised a big fund to help out Gen. Grant a few years ago, and through the liberality of Mr. Jay Gould the effort turned out handsome proportions. We are sorry to say that since then Jones has treated Gould with anything but the consideration which such munificence was entitled to from a beneficiary; but that is their affair not ours.

The Cornish Herald interprets the result in Pennsylvania: "Ninety-three majority on joint ballot in the Legislature is the verdict of Pennsylvania upon the folly of a Democratic State administration."

The whole South is Jame. G. Blaine was the most popular man in the Republican party. He was the idol of the younger men of the party; he was Garfield's heir, and his own great qualities as a speaker and politician inspired all his followers with hope.—Adam's Constitution, Dem.

The following letter from the New York Graphic will be of interest to the editor of the New York Evening Post and the Hon. Carl Schurz, as well as interesting to other Independents:

"It has been established, we think, that the Democratic party is not to be run here after by fourth-seller or military exhibitions. It may even be able to take care of itself without their noble help.

The new-swamp New York Times has been continually howling for a week over the certainty of the ballot-box" and "the certainty of the correct count," and charging right and left that "Republicans were fraudulent," and dishonestly interfering with both. On Tuesday, however, one week after election it says: "The only substantial cause of fraud yet discovered is that in Albany, which affected two local offices. The returns were handled about in a careless way in the County Clerk's office, and were clearly tampered with in the interest of the Democratic candidate for county Treasurer and Coroner. Every effort is to be made to discover and punish the guilty person or persons. The Returns will be corrected by the inspectors. Like other cases of tampering with the figures on an official return has been reported." All of which goes to strengthen the Times's position that the official count was necessary to determine the result in New York.

Perhaps the New York Herald will see in the Hon. Frank Hurd's resolve to test the right to his seat in Congress another evidence that "we are on the verge of revolution." Hurd was snowed under by a bigger majority than Cleveland claims in New York.

Warnings are being served on the Independents from all sides. The New York World, has already shown them the door and now the Troy Press gives them a parting kick. It says: "If the Independents came over to the help of the Democratic party because they did not believe that Mr. Blaine was a proper candidate for President, then of course they are above making claim for any place, and if they came for the purpose of seeking offices, they ought to be disappointed."

A margin of 1000 on a vote of 1,167,000, says the Boston Herald, is the closest recount ever Presidential candidate over had.

Like the fly on the wheel the Commercial seems to think it did the whole business, and it simply illustrates the usefulness of the Republican wigwam which was employed in so good purpose in the campaign that gave Blaine may such a tremendous thrashing in Bangor, in Penobscot county, and in the State of Maine.

The Democrats having received the votes of the living, pumps are now declining for the service on their part with thanks. It looks like a very cold season for the Democrats.

There is nothing so silly as the Democratic and Independent clamor that the Republicans shall give up Blaine's election before the official count is declared. There never was an election in New York when there have not been more changes between the newspaper and official returns than would now give Mr. Blaine the vote of the State. The official count only can decide. And if errors have been made in the returns of the count, as there always have been, the law specifically provides how they shall be corrected, and they are being corrected—as they always have been. This idea that because the Democrats claim 1100 or more plurality, makes it useless for any Republican to count whether the claim is well founded, is sheer nonsense. The aim is for the Democrats to threaten revolution if their count is not sustained. If the official returns.—Lowell Courier, Dec. 14.

The Democratic lightning calculators, who went to work the day after election and figured out a popular majority for Cleveland of 5,000 or 10,000 have come to grief. The best information attainable at the present time as to the vote cast in the several States gives Mr. Blaine eighty-three electoral votes. Official returns may change the standing of the candidates a little, but it is probable that there will be only a small gap between the vote cast by the Republican and Democratic parties. This does not take into account the half a million Republican votes suppressed in the South which by right and justice, belong to Mr. Blaine. With these, he would have one of the largest popular majorities ever given to a Presidential candidate.

There are more than one hundred thousand voters in Kansas who favor prohibitory legislation. At the recent election it is but about two thousand of them voted against Mr. St. John. They know that gentleman better than the country does, and perhaps personal reasons influenced some of the voters. We suspect, however, as the Boston Traveller, that the vote of fifty to one against the third party is rather an expression of their opinion that for all that has been done for prohibition in that State the Republican party should have the credit.

Eighteenth Annual Session.

THE OPENING SESSION OF THE CONVENTION OF THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION OF MAINE.

At 7:30 o'clock last evening, a welcome meeting was given in the vestry of the 2d Congregational church, to the delegates to the eighteenth annual convention of the Y. M. C. A. of the State. After singing by the choir, and scripture reading by Rev. C. E. Andrews, which was followed by prayer by Rev. Merrill Richard of the Pavilion church, the president of the Biddeford association, Mr. J. W. Pattrell, in appropriate remarks, briefly extended a cordial welcome to the delegates in behalf of the Y. M. C. A. of the city.

Rev. A. S. Ladd well loned the members in behalf of the churches. He believed that the association was doing good work all over the State, and that their labors had a tendency to bring churches into closer communion with God. The members of these associations are the people who are doing the Lord, building up Heaven; we welcome you to our homes and our hearts, and trust your labors while with us will be instrumental in much good.

Jesse Gould, Esq., gave an address of welcome in behalf of the city. Short addresses in response were given by Pierre McConville, of Bangor, and Mr. Wm. Wilkins, of New York. Mr. McConville in behalf of the Y. M. C. A. of the State, spoke appreciatively of the words upon the cordial greetings extended them, and said they had come to the city as representatives of the workers of the State, and as co-laborers in the cause of christianity.

Mr. Watkins, a member of the Y. M. C. A. of New York, said that during his visits to the Pine Tree State he had noticed three things for which Maine was noted—large trees, large cities and large hearts; and he saw that Biddeford was not an exception to the rule. He reviewed the work of the association in other States and in foreign countries, giving a brief history of the rise and progress and the present prosperous condition. The temperance question, he said he thought was a connecting link in the work in all the English speaking world. Referring to the recent World's convention of the Y. M. C. A. held at Berlin, he stated that letters of welcome were received from King William of Germany, the Czar of Russia, and other members of royalty, to which words of approval were given both as to the christian and temperance ways of the association. Our work, said he, is not antagonistic to the church. Our duty is due to the church and then to the association.

Journal of the Greek Church in the State of Maine, and added the cause to church prosperity for the meeting closed with the benediction by Rev. F. E. Davison.

FRIDAY

At 9:30 o'clock to-day the delegates assembled at Y. M. C. A. hall when a prayer and praise service was held, led by J. A. Gould, of Bangor. At 10 o'clock the president, Pierre McConville, called the convention to order. The committee on permanent organization made the following nominations of officers for the ensuing year who were unanimously elected:

President, S. B. Hale, of Biddeford; first vice-president, Abel Packard, of Auburn; second vice-president, A. J. Dole, of Bangor; third vice-president, W. S. Carey, of Portland; recording secretary, T. T. Hazelwood, of Augusta; assistant secretary, J. A. Gould, of Bangor. Mr. Libby in accepting the office of president expressed his thanks to the convention for the honor conferred upon him. Mr. McConville was voted to fill the committees of the convention. The following committees were appointed by the president:

Business committee—Hr. Carlton Marshall, of Portland; E. H. Packard, of Lewiston; Francis Philbrick, of Biddeford.

Devotional committee—Rev. Merrill Richmond, of Biddeford; B. P. Whitney, of Portland; E. L. Sprague, of Augusta.

Reception committee—J. H. Burgess, of Biddeford; A. A. Dole, of Bangor; Mr. Pajrk, of Saco College.

Committee on resolutions—Mr. Burgess, of Auburn; Jesse Gould, of Biddeford; R. S. Arnold, of Colby University.

While the committee on business and devotional exercises were hearing words of greeting upon spoken by Delegates Cores, Dole, Dewey and Rev. Messrs. Cousins, Rumsey and Howe.

After listening to the report of the business committee the convention adjourned until 2 p. m.

The following programme was carried out this afternoon:

At 2 o'clock there was a prayer and praise service followed half an hour later by a paper on State work. How shall it be carried on with the most success? by Mr. McConville, of Bangor, and discussed by the delegates. At 3:15 the subject of boys' work came up. A paper on "How to sustain it successfully," was presented by J. A. Gould, of Bangor. At 4 o'clock a paper was read on the "Business management of the Young Men's Christian Association," by E. W. Watkins, of New York.—Boston Journal, 14th.

Not A Burglar.

AN EXPERT OPENER OF SAFES—NO CONNECTION WITH INTERCEPTING MAILS.

(Washington Cor.)

Locks? Locks won't keep burglars out. Why, I can open any kind of lock that has ever been invented, without key or combination." The speaker was close-shaven, eminent, penetrating-looking man. He stood in a back-smith's shop changing the dial of a combination lock on the end of a thick wire.

The sign in front of the door read, "Time Lock Inspector and Safe Opener."

"Do you make a practice of breaking open safes?" asked the Star man.

"I open safes when authorized to do so, replied the smith, giving the order a decided breaking look which might have occurred had he been a burglar. "To-day, I opened safes when the locks were out of order or the combination lost. Sometimes a man will roll the lock of his safe and get it jammed up so that the numbers won't work and he can't get it open. Sometimes a forgetful will lose their combination. Safes are sold at sheriff's sale sometimes and the owner being mad, won't give up the combination. When anything of that kind happens they send for me. If the lock is broken so that it won't work I drill a little hole along side the dial and pick the bolts with a small tool. If the lock is all right, only the combination is lost, I go to work to find it and don't notice the safe at all. It takes me from half an hour to six hours to open a safe according to the kind and the method I employ."

"But how can you find the combination? Does it not take a long time?"

"By testing. As to that it depends upon circumstances. If I know the man who set the combination, I can find it in a very few minutes. If I don't, it takes longer. You see, I study the character of the man, and if I know him pretty well I can strike the combination through his character. When a stranger comes to me to say he lost his combination I make a study of him, and in nine cases out of ten I can hit it the second or third trial. If the man did not set the combination himself it is more difficult. Then I study the lock instead of the man, and I am sure to get it open in a few hours. Oh, no! It wouldn't do to tell you how. Safe openers are dangers in a community. They are always watched by police. They keep an eye on me all the time. I have them trying my door, all hours of the night, and there's generally one somewhere around. No, I couldn't teach you how to open safes. But you might not find it easy to learn. There is a kind of revolution between the locks—a understanding, as it were. We have the same way of thinking.

"Could you open a burglar-proof time lock?"

I can open the best lock that was ever made, in five or six hours. Those high office safes I wouldn't put that much time on. They don't pay enough. I just take a hammer and break the knob off, and can get into the safe in about three seconds."

"What do you get for opening a safe?"

"For a little three second safe I get $10. For large safes like they have in banks and brokers' offices, and where they don't want the lock injured I get $250."

"Could you open the great safe in the United States treasury?"

"Easily. I could get rid of the time lock and everything in six or seven hours and wouldn't make any particular fuss about it, either. Nowadays whatever made that it had some weak point known to the maker, so he could get into it in case the lock should refuse to respond. If there wasn't
